Decode the message worksheet

Warning: Can only detect less than 5000 characters The grid and the second letter comes from its horizontal axis. For example, if "DG" were the first two letters from deciphering in a cryptogram, you would find the letter "D" on the vertical axis and the letter "G" on the horizontal axis. Tracks through the grid for the intersection to the letter "A" in the clear text. To decode the fictitious message in the cryptogram, start grouping each set of two letters starting with the first two letters (FG) and continuing through the message. The code letters are arbitrarily arranged in groups of five letters. Some pairs of letters will take from one line to another. When you identify each letter in the grid, you should write that letter above the pair of code letters to which it matches. There are no punctuation marks in the telegram, so your teacher may need to help you clarify the message. Read the decoded message! Return to Zimmermann Telegram JL Popyack, October 1997 This guide is intended to help with understanding the operation of the Cryptography system of the RSA / decryption scheme. No provision is made for high precision arithmetic, nor algorithms have been coded for efficiency when it comes to large numbers.
